Did you know???

The Riverside-San Bernardino metro area's housing wage increased slightly:

- Median monthly rent for a one-bedroom apartment ($957) is not affordable to many lower wage occupations, including retail salespersons, home health aides, and transportation and materials moving occupations.
- The graduated increases in the California minimum wage are having a positive impact on what a minimum wage-earning household can afford to pay monthly in rent, rising from $416 per month at $8 per hour in 2014 to $546 per month at $10.50 per hour in 2017. Future graduated increases in the minimum wage, which were signed into law in April 2016, may help further close the gap between median rents and wages.
