

San Manuel Gateway College

The San Manuel Gateway College is the first of its kind in the United States. The college will integrate training programs in health careers with clinical experience, allowing students to benefit from hands-on training and mentoring by Loma Linda University Health faculty and students.

San Manuel Gateway College will offer a number of health career certificate programs. These six to 18-month certificate programs will provide job entry skills, employment and college credit for students who elect to further their education.
